

What Is LRI?

The Learning in Retirement Institute at George Mason University is part of a network of similar organizations at colleges and universities around the country that provide opportunities for older adults to explore intellectual and cultural subjects and to share their experience and talents. Its members, who come from diverse backgrounds, seek to enrich their lives through new learning experiences.

LRI is membership-run. There are no exams, no credits, no grades and no college degree required. Course leaders are qualified members of LRI and other instructors who enjoy sharing their knowledge.

LRI offers eight-week sessions in the fall and spring, plus shorter mid-winter and summer programs. LRI also offers forums and other special events and off-campus social activities throughout the year.

Making new friends is an important part of LRI, and members enjoy chatting between classes and at lunch. Some classes have end-of-semester parties, which are always popular.

Classes are held at various locations in Fairfax City. All have parking or are convenient to CUE and LINK buses. Class locations are shown on confirmation forms mailed after registration.

Membership dues are $200 for a full year or $125 for each half year (defined as one eight-week session plus either the mid-winter or summer program). Members are entitled to take at least two courses in each term and additional ones as space permits. Membership also entitles you to participate in LRI's special events and other activities and to receive LRI News, which is published throughout the year.

To register for Spring classes, please use the form on page 17. Use the back of the form to sign up for Special Events.

The Learning in Retirement Institute at George Mason University is a non-profit, equal-opportunity, affirmative-action institution.

Courses

In some courses the instructor will provide handouts or suggest books or other materials that members may want to purchase or get from a library. (See page 12 for information on instructors.)

101 Foundations of the Visual Arts

Tuesday, 2:00 p.m.

Lola Sherman
The course will examine fundamental issues associated with the visual arts: What characteristics define art? What social and aesthetic purposes does art serve? How do varying perceptions of reality affect artistic depiction? What is the role of the viewer? What methodologies are used to study art? Painting, printmaking, architecture and sculpture will be analyzed. The basic components of all works — content, form, design and style — will be explored.

Wednesday, 9:30 a.m. Sam Di Bonaventura
The 1700's saw the rise of Classicism, inspired by the antique civilizations of Greece and Rome. As applied to music, Classicism refers to the works of those composers whose music expresses clarity, repose, balance, proportion, lyricism and restraint of emotion. The leading names are Sammartini, Gluck, the Bach brothers, Stamitz, Boccherini, Haydn and Mozart. They were supported by enthusiastic and sophisticated patrons, such as Maria Theresa, Marie Antoinette, Georges I-III, Catherine the Great, and Frederick the Great. Through lectures, listening to music and class discussions, participants will gain a deeper appreciation of this period's contribution to the world's musical heritage.

201 Economic Issues of the 90's

Monday, 9:30 a.m. Moderator: Morris Allen Outstanding guest speakers will address major economic issues, followed by question periods and class discussions.

- ◆ Lawrence Fox, economist and former vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers, on "Economic Policy in the Clinton Administration";
- Frank Swoboda, national labor correspondent and former financial editor for the Washington Post, on "Labor Issues in the 90's";
- Maja Wessels, General Accounting Office, on "Savings and Loan Crisis: Over or Not? And What About the Banking System?";

Joseph Froomkin, consulting economist, on "Economic Evolution in Eastern Europe: From Communism to What?":

Dieter Dettka, executive director of the Friedrich Ebert Foundation, on "Germany: An Economic Appraisal";

Maureen Smith, former Japan desk officer, U.S. Department of Commerce, on "Japan: An Economic Appraisal";

Marco Pollner, former executive director of the Washington Bureau of the Economic Commission for Latin America, on "Latin America: An Economic Overview";

Gregory B. Foote, assistant general counsel of the Environmental Protection Administration, on "Environmental Protection Issues in the 90's."

301 From Imperial Russia Through the Post-Soviet Experience

Monday, 11:30 a.m. Rae Newstad Ideology notwithstanding, old Russian habits and beliefs not only survived the Bolshevik Revolution but determined the essential character of Soviet society. This course will examine such topics as religion, literature and the arts, the role of civil society, Great Russian ethnocentricity, the legacy of Czarist ideology, and attitudes toward the West. Each issue will be addressed from a historical perspective to demonstrate the tenacity of tradition.

302 The Rise of Rome

Tuesday, 9:30 a.m. Glenn R. Markus During the five centuries before Christ, a group of tough, dedicated Roman peasant farmers and citizen soldiers, under the leadership of an oligarchy of aristocrats, first conquered all of Italy and then extended dominion throughout the Mediterranean world. As Roman power grew, the loyalty of the population to its leaders seemed assured. But it soon became difficult for the lower political orders to benefit from new conquests, while the competition for privilege, wealth and power among the ruling classes was increasingly bitter and violent. Eventually, the Roman Republic collapsed into civil war and anarchy. This seminar examines the rise and fall of the Roman Republic and its replacement by the even more powerful Roman Empire under Caesar Augustus. Students will study Greek and Latin works (in English) that provide first-hand accounts of the power that was Rome. There is a significant amount of reading each week, and students should plan to buy three books, costing approximately $26.

303 The Secret Revolution: 1774-1783

Tuesday, 11:30 a.m. Allen J. Montecino, Jr.

This study-discussion course covers the history of spying and secret operations in the American Revolutionary War, focusing on the successes, failures, and special problems that intelligence operations brought to the infant American Republic. The shadowy world of secret intelligence brought opportunities and posed problems for the Republic, some of which are still controversial today.

304 Africa

Wednesday, 9:30 a.m. Charles Cremeans or Wednesday, 2:00 p.m.*

The spring term course will cover Africa from the era of European exploration and discovery, the scramble of European countries for control of trade and access to raw materials, the colonization and establishment of the empire through World War II. The course will provide the cultural and historical background of current African problems.

*Register for either the morning or the afternoon session, not both. A course on developments since World War II is planned for the fall term.

305 Fairfax County Yesterday and Today

Thursday, 9:30 a.m. Moderator: Eleanor K. Morrow Each week a guest speaker will present a different aspect of Fairfax County's development, starting with a historical survey by Ross Netherton, co-author with his wife, Nan, of several books on Fairfax County history. Other topics: churches and other religious institutions; county government; economic development; the African-American experience; the public schools; the environment; recent demographic changes and future trends. Among the guest speakers are Audrey Moore, a 20-year member of the Board of Supervisors; Harry Doyle, Area Manager of C&P Telephone Company; Verdia Haywood, Assistant County Executive; and Kenneth Billingsley of the Northern Virginia Planning District Commission.

401 Contemporary Cuba

Thursday, 2:00 p.m.

Jane Wilhelm This course will reflect the instructor's experiences on a visit to Cuba March 9-19, 1993, as a member of a delegation sponsored by Promoting Enduring Peace, Inc. of New Haven Connecticut. Suggested reading material: The Cuba Reader, edited by Philip Brenner and William M. Lee Grande of American University, Donna Rich of the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies, and Daniel Siegel of the Institute for Policy Studies. The book is available from the George Mason University bookstore for $14.95.

402 China's Role in the Asia-Pacific Area of the 21st Century

Monday, 2:00 p.m.

Bert Kassell

This seminar will look at the impact of China's "reform and opening up" program, its relations with Asia's four "mini-dragons" — Hong Kong, Singapore, South Korea and Taiwan — and the challenge posed by the industrialized democracies of the United States, Japan, the European Community and Commonwealth of Independent States. Recommended readings: John King Fairbank, China, A New History, (The Belknap Press of the Harvard University Press, 1992), and Harry Harding, A Fragile Relationship, The United States and China Since 1972, (The Brookings Institution, 1992).

501 Introduction to Spanish

Wednesday, 11:30 a.m. Eleanor D. Navarrete This course, designed for those who have never studied Spanish and those who need a basic review, will use the conversational method. Reading and writing skills will also be developed, with an emphasis on practical topics. Grammar will be discussed as needed. The course will also provide a brief look at the geography, history and culture of Spain, and games and songs will add to the enjoyment.

502 Conversational Spanish

Wednesday, 2:00 p.m. Eleanor D. Navarrete Using video cassettes, the class will take an eventful journey to Mexico, Argentina and Puerto Rico while learning Spanish in the rich cultures where it is spoken. Vocabulary, conversation and grammar will be studied prior to each video viewing. This course is a continuation of an earlier LRI course. Prerequisite: An introductory Spanish course or its equivalent.

601 Poetry Workshop

Tuesday, 9:30 a.m.

Ellen Anderson

This popular workshop is for anyone who wants to write poetry, whether he or she is a beginner or has written for several years. Each student may submit new poems each week for class critiques and suggestions for potential markets for sale of poems. This is not a course in appreciation of poetry by established poets; it is a writing workshop for new poets.

602 From Wordsworth to T.S. Eliot

Wednesday, 11:30 a.m. Dorothy W. Millner The class will study the great odes of the Romantic period, as well as major poetry of the Victorian age and the modern era. The objectives are to gain a better understanding and to enjoy the poetry, including how the poets' work reflected the climate of their times.

603 Book Discussion: Effective Living

Thursday, 11:30 a.m. Moderator: Ed Jones The national best seller The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People by Stephen Covey, will serve as the focal point for exploring "effective living." Participants will be both LRI members and individuals employed at GMU's Commerce Building II. This should provide for perspectives from different ages, genders and occupational backgrounds.

701 What Is an American?

Thursday, 11:30 a.m. Catherine Deverall This course will look at current problems that tend to disrupt our society, with outside speakers invited to give insight into problems of various elements of our society. Discussions will be aimed at ways to solve the problems in a manner that will bind us together as Americans.

801 The Supreme Court: 1992-1993

Tuesday, 11:30 a.m.

Garrett Ruhl

Case-based reviews of 1992 Supreme Court decisions will provide the basis for discussion of policy issues and the Court's role in our federal system. Class members are encouraged, but not required, to analyze actual Court opinions. General objectives of the course include an understanding of the trend of recent judgments, recognition of alternatives to lawsuits, and an understanding of individual, group and states' rights. There will be frequent discussions of current news about the Supreme Court. (Note the March 15 Special Event on page 9.)

802 Great Decisions

Wednesday, 2:00 p.m.

Chester Myslicki

Using a discussion format, this course will examine eight areas of current foreign policy, with topics and essential background information coming from the Great Decisions national program. The goal is not to reach a consensus, but to allow participants to enhance their understanding of foreign policy issues by reading, by analysis and by interaction with each other. Opinion ballots will be taken at the end of each session and summary tabulations forwarded for national tabulations. The study book costs approximately $10.

803 Point of View

Thursday, 9:30 a.m.

Flora Hedblom

What do other LRI members think about major public policy issues of our times? The spirited discussions that took place during last fall's Point of View class led to requests for a continuation with new topics, such as racism, gun control, legalization of drugs, and improvement in education.

901 Tropical Ecosystems of Costa Rica

Wednesday, 4:30 p.m.

Henry Zoller

The course instructor and guest speakers will present an overview of Costa Rican history, political system and economy and then explore its plant life and ecosystems and what is being done about conservation. The class will visit the rain forest exhibit at the National Zoo. The last session will cover tourist expectations and tips on travel to Costa Rica.
